

U 013796-2

- 10 -

Abstract

An apparatus and the method thereof comprising two floating devices of different size operating in tandem. The floating devices of the same design have their respective ends made from materials of different densities to keep the devices in submerged state when put in a liquid-filled container. An automatic revolution of the floating device is achieved when the balancing status of the larger floating device is tilted by the smaller floating device.

EV011019895US